INFERIOR roads seem cheap and easy to build. They stretch a paving fund so that it covers a lot of territory. But after a year or two, the trouble begins! Maintenance costs go up and up. That's why it's wise—and economical—to build concrete roads. Concrete lasts! It requires almost no upkeep. Concrete's smooth riding, skid resistant surface speeds up traffic... reduces accidents... you save in gas, tires and repairs. Urge public officials to build all main highways of safe and saving concrete.

Pheiffer Is Back Again

Representative
Relies on People on Vote Problems

By JACK STINNETT
WASHINGTON—That man Pheiffer is back again. I mean Representative William T. of New York's 16th district, which is down in Manhattan's East Side.

Representative Pheiffer is a House freshman and, therefore, isn't supposed to have any ideas, but he does. If you'll remember, he was first of the congressmen to try to find out exactly how his constituents wanted him to vote on the first Lend-Lease Bill. He found out by polling his district's voters and their word was his law.

So far as I can find out, Pheiffer is not first to come up with the idea that a seat in congress is a corporation, that every voter in the district is a stockholder, and that as the elected president of that corporation, it's up to him to make an annual report for the calendar year, "on the principle that the shareholders own the corporation and are rightfully entitled to know what has been done with their property."

Representative Pheiffer's report is a closely packed four-page printed pamphlet. The only difference, he points out, between this and any other annual corporation report to the shareholders is that the corporation generally bears the expense. In this instance, the "president," being Mr. Pheiffer, bore the expense and mailed the report to every registered voter in his district.

He launches immediately into such statistical business as: "Number of roll calls (taken in the House) during the year, 133; number attended by me, 128."

He lists his attendance at the three committees of which he is a member; the number of public bills, private bills and amendments he offered; and an accounting of the appointments and nominations he made to West Point and Annapolis.

He mentions that in the course of the year's sessions, he made 23 prepared speeches (exclusive of eulogies to deceased members) in Congress. Then, Mr. Pheiffer gives a four-page report on his stand on every major issue before Congress in 1941. Grouping these under "Foreign Relations and National Defense"; "Labor"; "Appropriations and Taxes"; and "Miscellaneous," he just about covers the legislative waterfront.

Being identified with the "anti-interventionist" group in the House (but also being for all-out defense preparations); a worker in the labor vineyard but convinced that unscrupulous labor leaders and agitators had no business trying to block defense effort; in favor of limitless appropriations for defense but a sometimes violent exponent of economies in other government spending; the Congressman had some hard sailing on the floor but he made it seem like a few consistent tacks into a gusty gale. He did it by quoting, not over-copiously, from his own speeches before the house.

The Representative was one of the first in the 77th Congress, first session, to advocate unity. Although a Republican and a so-called anti-interventionist, exactly ten months to the day before Pearl Harbor, he told congress:

"There is no Republican brand of patriotism and no Democratic brand of patriotism. The Republican elephant and the Democratic donkey are going to pull together in double harness in the welding of all our people into a united front in our dealings with the rest of the world."

It's too bad that all of the elected "presidents" of these voting "corporations" can't make annual reports to the "shareholders." It would cost a wad of dough, much too big a wad for most representatives to spend out of their own jeans, but it might be worth it from a public appropriation standpoint to know at least once a year how your representative and mine has been deporting himself.

CAN'T KEEP GRANDMA IN HER CHAIR

She's as lively as a Youngster—
Now her Backache is better

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's gland of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pain, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, aching, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

TWO DEFENDERS

CHAPTER XXVIII

IT was then that Juddy laughed out loud. It was a queer spot for a laugh. Or was it? There was something sort of triumphant about that laugh.

Maurie Sears went crazy. "Good God Juddy!" he yelled. His voice dropped to a snarl. "You dirty coward! You've got her there to save you hide."

"That's a lie, Laurie Sears," I said. "Mom, too!" He sort of gasped. But his thought was all for my pal. "You can't stay there," he said, like a man praying. "You can't... my sweet... Oliver, if you're a man you'll give her to me."

Juddy said, "He can't. I won't go." Laurie whirled around to face the mob. It was inching forward. "Men, there are two ladies in here."

"Let 'em get out. Nobody wants to harm the girls." Doe's voice snapped. "Keep back, there. No further!" "You can't hold them," Laurie warned him.

I said in Doc's ear, "Ask 'em for 10 minutes to confer on it."

He passed it to Laurie, and Laurie put it to the crowd and reported back that they'd stand for five minutes; no more. Back in the darkness a voice was shouting, "Where's those fatwood torches?"

I touched Old Swoby on the shoulder. "Take your coat and pants off," I told him.

I snatched my clothes and got him into them. There was some hay in the corner to fill out the proper curves. Lucky I had on the old, floppy bonnet I usually wore around the camp. That would pretty well hide his face.

I made him walk across the floor a couple of times to get the right gait. Then I called Dolf. He figured to be the best part of the disguise, being a famous figure in the locality, and everybody knowing he was my watchdog. While I was walking Swoby I outlined what he had to do and prayed God he could do it.

"It's simple," I said. "The only question is whether you've got the guts to carry it through."

"Then I go," he said. "I'm afraid; yes. But I go."

"Atta boy!" I patted his shoulder. "Wait till I speak my lines, then walk out there like you was in a hurry but not too much of a hurry. Beat it for the woods."

I OPENED the door and stuck out my head with the bonnet on it.

The crowd gave me a hand. "It's Mom Bummer! In person." "Howdy, Mom." "Make mine a pork barbecue with cawfee."

"Say it, Mom." "I suppose you birds are thinking it's you that are getting me out of here. You couldn't get me out with a cable, I'd see you in hell first. But—well—you all know my little skunk. I gave a yank on the leash and Dolf stuck his nose out. 'I reckon I'd better take him out, as he's in a hurry. O. K. by you?'"

"Sure, Mom!" By the laugh I got I knew it was going all right. "You get your big dogs out of the way." Those bloodhounds didn't fit into my plan at all.

That struck them as good sense. They shut the hounds in the woodshed.

I ducked back, handed the leash to Old Swoby, jammed the bonnet down over his ears, and gave him a shove. I figured that nobody in that bunch was going to interfere with a skunk who was in a hurry.

Old Swoby was good. He waved his hand and scuttled for the nearest thickets. As he left the crowd heard the voice under the bonnet say,

"Thanks, gents. Back in five minutes."

That's what they thought they heard. Juddy and Doc nearly threw a fit. I never told 'em that I'd done a vaudeville turn as the ventriloquist when I was on the stage.

It looked like everything was going to be O. K. Old Swoby would have time to reach the woods. The bloodhounds wouldn't be after him this time. But I wasn't too easy in the old mind when I tried to figure what would happen when they found the game had slipped them.

The moon backed into a cloud. I got the impression of a lot of movement going on outside. The firing started up again. I let off the old pump-gun out the back window, by the way of warning. From what I could make out, Laurie Sears was doing his best to hold them. He called:

"Mom! Juddy! Are you coming out?"

Juddy didn't answer. Laurie was hurrying up and down, now, trying to be everywhere at once. There were scattering shots again. I couldn't see him now. Somebody yelled,

"My God! They've got Sears!" "Who did it?" "One of those rats in there."

THE low mutter went through the crowd and got deeper and savagier, like nothing human. It went down my spine like dripping ice. I knew then it was life-and-death now for Doc anyway, if they thought he fired the shot.

A bunch of them came out of cover and carried something toward the house. Doc opened the door enough for a look-see. Nobody was coming our way. Doc said,

"Juddy!" She went over to him. "This may seem a queer time to say it. But I don't want you to think that I cheated you."

She put out her hands to him. "Oh, Loren!" she said.

He held out his arms. She came into them as if she belonged there. But it wasn't what she expected. He swung her out through the door and barred it behind her. She turned and beat at the heavy logs like a crazy thing until some young chaps ran up and dragged her away. They looked to me like Welliver boys. O. K. We'd have some friends in the crowd when it came to a showdown.

"I'd do the same to you if I were big enough," he said.

Everything was so quiet outside we could hear them calling from bush to bush.

"Is he dead?" "As good as. They got him through the lungs."

"I'd hate to be the guy that did it."

"That rat Oliver done it. I seen him draw a bead through the window." That was Bixie Groff.

"Get the fatwood. We'll burn him out and string him up."

"Come on, fellas." That was Bixie again. "What the hell we doodlin' around for? Let's get him."

"Shoot that guy, Doc," I said. "I'm holding my shot," he said. He kind of laughed. "Come over here and give me a kiss, Mom, and then get out of here. You're no use to me now."

What I answered him didn't take much time. "Don't be vulgar, Mom," he said and laughed again.

The torches began coming, then, curving through the air and landing on all sides, but most of them short. One rolled under my window and I doused it with a pail of water. Another one, near the corner, I couldn't reach. Smoke began to come up.

Those brave, bloodthirsty lynchers weren't taking any chances with their precious hides. They were possum hunters; burn 'em out and pop 'em down. The smoke was thickening when I heard the prettiest music that ever blessed my old ears. It was the police siren. Two cars came in on the high jump and four husky young cops tumbled out.

What's Matter With Capital?

Washington Undergoes Change in Wartime

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—Not in recent years certainly not since the last world war, has the question been so often asked: What's the matter with Washington?

The question has nothing to do with world affairs. The "Washington" referred to is the city. The reason for the question is that the city is a mess. For more than a year, civil service and other government officials have been warning the District of Columbia about the prospective influx of federal workers.

Newspapers and commentators have pointed to the inadequacies of housing, office space, traffic, welfare agencies, schools, hospitals and a dozen other things. But what is done about it all adds up to a big zero.

The reason is that Congress rules the District and congressmen, for the most part aren't interested. The District committees in the House and Senate are considered the biggest headaches of any assignments and "District Day" in either branch of Congress (those days when matters pertaining to Washington are considered are marked on many congressmen's calendars as holidays).

As a partial solution for the housing situation, the District has opened a defense housing agency that registers every available room-for-rent in the area and does them out to incoming workers. The local newspapers gave this excellent support. The result, as of present date, is that the agency has a listing of slightly more than 2,000 rooms—enough for two weeks at the present rate of new government hirings—and the well is running dry.

As for office space—only by using the old Gen. Brehon B. Somervell method of building first and getting authorization later has the government been able to up its temporary building campaign to within a mile of physical requirements.

The traffic and transportation problem would make a good volume in itself. Some idea of how critical it has become may be gleaned from the serious recommendation of Frederic A. Delano, national capital park and planning commissioner. The President's uncle recently suggested that no automobile (or taxi) be allowed in the mid-town area unless it carried three passengers.

Similar suggestions for a solution to all of Washington's ills are numerous. The District doesn't have an ache or pain that a dozen "medicos" don't rush to the bedside with suggested remedies—but there it ends.

Most students of the Washington scene attribute all this to the fact that District of Columbia residents have no vote. Perhaps that is true.

A party treat that can't be beat! punch a la Karo

Serve this smooth, creamy, luscious cherry milk punch at your next bridge party... But don't let the family start tasting it before the guests arrive—or you'll have to make a new lot! For this is an irresistible drink! Good for everyone—KARO is rich in Dextrose, food-energy sugar!

CHERRY MILK PUNCH
1/2 (No. 2) can red tart pit cherries
1/2 cup KARO (red label)
1 teaspoon vanilla
6 cups milk
1/2 cup cream, whipped
8 Maraschino cherries
1 sprig mint
Drain cherries, and chop into small pieces. Combine again with fruit juice; add KARO, and vanilla. Stir in milk. Chill. Pour in tall glasses, and top with whipped cream. Decorate with a Maraschino cherry and a mint leaf. Makes 8 (8-ounce) glasses.

State-Line Town Is Blackout Orphan

DELMAR, Md.—(AP)—Half a blackout is worse than none at all, decided civilian defense officials in this town split by the Delaware-Maryland line. Micomity county, Maryland, planned a county-wide blackout, including half of Delmar. But Sussex county, Delaware, in which the other half is located, made no plans for cooperating.

Deciding it wouldn't do to darken only half the town, defense officials left Delmar lighted on both sides of the main street which marks the state line.

Mind Your Manners

Test your knowledge of correct social usage by answering the following questions, then checking against the authoritative answers below:

- Does a husband kiss his bride at the end of a home wedding ceremony?
- Should a good friend rush in and kiss the bride before she has been kissed by her own and her husband's parents?
- Should the groom send the bride's mother a corsage to wear to the wedding?
- Should a man pick out his fiancée's engagement ring himself or ask her to help select it?
- Should a girl who is engaged to a young man in an army camp feel she must not have dates with other men?

What would you do if —
You do not like the setting of the engagement ring your fiancée picked out for you and ask him if he will have it reset or exchange it for another ring?
(b) Feel this is one time when you should put sentiment ahead of frankness and don't let your fiancée know you don't like the ring he chose for you?

Answers

- Yes.
- No.
- Yes.
- Either way he likes.
- That is for her and her fiancée to decide.

Better Make Suits Last

However, Lots of Boys Wearing Army Clothes Now

By HERMAN ALLEN
AP Feature Service Writer
WASHINGTON—Here's one benefit—although a left-handed one—that war conferred on the American consumer. A war production official told the story this way:
"When war came, many men put on a uniform instead of a new suit. Since men's clothing is made up a year or more ahead of time, this left great stocks of suits on hand for those in civilian life."
The official, sketching a broad picture of what the clothing situation will probably be after a year of war, was optimistic on most counts.
Shipping and Suits
"We can say," he continued, "that there is enough wool yardage on hand and enough suits on the racks to last easily through the coming year. After that it depends on the shipping situation—whether we can get enough wool from Australia and South America to go with our domestic clip, which supplies less than half of our normal requirements."

Diplomatic Note: How to Swing S. A.

NEW YORK —(AP)— If the United States wants South American good will, say the Raymond Loewys, it should send down a good jazz band and keep the institution boys at home.
The industrial designer and his wife formed their opinion after a three-month business and vacation tour.
Eighty per cent of the music they heard in South America, the Loewys say, was of northern origin. "Daddy" was a huge favorite, because it was an easy word to say.
"You can sit at a table and start discussing the States and the talk may get pretty acid," says Loewy. "Then the band hits up 'Daddy' and the argument is all over. They smile and clap their hands with the music."

Dudley Gordon has returned to Dallas after spending a few days here.
This is because manufacturing equipment is needed for uniforms.
Less Fancy Colors
"Another thing, there are some dyes that we can't get any more. Overalls and work clothes probably will be made in the natural color instead of blue, for instance.
"We have a surplus of cotton, of course, but we have a smaller supply of yard goods in cotton than in wool because some cotton looms have been turning out stuff for sandbags. However, there's plenty to last the year and then some, particularly if women will cut down a little on house dresses. Sometimes they buy a half dozen at a time."
Silk imports are gone, but production officials figure there will still be plenty of rayon and nylon. The present stock of girdles and other clothing items containing rubber will last the year, but after that it probably will be just too bad. Defense also gets first call on metals and many of the things that go into plastics, so there may be a shortage on buttons and trimmings.
The war did a left-handed—or left-footed—thing to shoes, too. The Agricultural Department is calling for an increase in the kill of cattle from 25,000,000 to about 28,000,000—and there's that much more leather.
"As far as we can tell now," a leather man assured me, "there will be plenty of good quality shoes for everybody through the next year and probably for the next two or three years, if the war lasts that long."
Heels and Toes
"Shoe production increased 25 per cent to 500,000,000 pairs last year. The Army took 20,000,000 pairs, really only a drop in the bucket. The increase in slaughter of steers will take care of a further increase in shoe manufacture if necessary.
"Rubber heels may have to be discontinued but the rubber industry has found it can make heels satisfactorily out of reclaimed rubber, and there seems to be plenty of reclaimed rubber for the present. If it runs out, we'll have to fall back on leather heels."
In the unlikely event that a leather shortage should develop, the Army will naturally get first call, and after that the supply will go to work shoes. Meanwhile, lady, there's no need to worry about those inexpensive fabric shoes. Plenty of material—and they can't make army shoes on those machines anyway.
